Vasari Secondary School is a community where everyone is free to learn and the school staff, parents and students support common shared values. The school is committed to promoting fundamental democratic values through dialogue, research and social experience, in an environment fostering the cultural development of students, focusing on treating one's self and others with high regard and respect, as well as understanding that rights, duties and sense of responsibility are an essential requirement for freedom and contribute to the greater good of society.

The school recognizes the Constitutional guidelines in removing obstacles to learning and provides a range of opportunities for students to fulfil their potential and achieve their personal best, with support and follow-up activities as well as the promotion of academic excellence and success. We aim at building up strong academic fundamentals and helping students develop a positive attitude towards learning by nurturing intellectual curiosity, consolidating intrinsic and extrinsic drives, and by boosting self-esteem. The school policy is a continuum: common goals have been set together with other schools and with the local territory; all our students are helped to discover and realize their potential and aspirations, as well as to bridge any shortcomings; tradition is combined with creativity and innovation in methods and technology. Our aim is also to help remove any obstacles that may hinder the full development of the individual and we are committed to ensuring that all clever and worthy students achieve the highest academic goals, even if without means. The school is open to any creative contributions expressed conscientiously by its members and reflects the cultural, social and economic needs of the local territory.

The set of rules and regulations that have governed the school for the last few years are important if they become firm beliefs and change behaviour, modifying what is done and how it is done.
